The Ideal Refugees

Gender, Islam, and the Sahrawi Politics of Survival

Elena Fiddian-Qasmiyeh

“A path-breaking analysis of the politics, colonial history, and present-day realities of the Sahrawi refugee camps. Fiddian-Qasmiyeh reveals the extent to which the common representation of these camps as gender-equal spaces free from violence is the result of a carefully honed strategy designed to maintain support from international solidarity networks. What she finds is something rather different, and this certainly raises many questions, political as well as humanitarian. Everyone concerned with contemporary refugees and the way refugee camps are managed will benefit from reading this book.”

—Robert J.C. Young, New York University

“This lucid and sensitive account of the Sahrawi refugee context invites us to reflect critically about the intersections of the politics of gender with the international ‘canons’ of aid to refugees. It offers a wonderfully nuanced picture of the effects of forced migration and refugee experiences on the negotiation and crafting of gender identities.”

—Deniz Kandiyoti, SOAS, University of London

Gender, Culture, and Politics in the Middle East

Forthcoming Spring 2014

Preserving the Old City of Damascus

Faedah M. Totah

“A unique perspective onto a city and a population undergoing rapid change.”

—Jonathan Shannon, associate professor of anthropology, Hunter College

Totah examines the recent gentrification of the historic urban core of the Syrian capital and the ways in which urban space becomes the site for negotiating new economic and social realities. The book illustrates how, instead of outright outrage, long-term inhabitants of the historic quarter engaged in their own mediation process with the government, investors, and the international community to maintain a sense of belonging and connectedness to their neighborhoods. Based on over two years of ethnographic and archival research, this book expands our understanding of neoliberal urbanism in non-western cities.

Raging Against the Machine

_Political Opposition under Authoritarianism in Egypt_

Holger Albrecht

“The book reminds us to go beyond dichotomous readings of regimes and opposition, authoritarianism and democracy, and in doing so, helps us to understand opposition not only under Mubarak, but in present-day Egypt as well.”—Ellen Lust, Yale University

We Are Iraqis

_Aesthetics and Politics in a Time of War_

Edited by Nadje Al-Ali and Deborah Al-Najjar

“In a very touching account, _We Are Iraqis_ strikes the right chord within Iraqi popular memory, hooking readers’ attention towards the suffering of the Iraqi people in general and the middle class in particular.”—Choice

_Elite Politics in Postwar Lebanon_

Rola el-Husseini

“The study’s rich details and clear exposition provide a very accessible introduction for anyone interested in the contemporary politics of Lebanon. Not only does el-Husseini provide a succinct, but substantially comprehensive political history of postwar Lebanon, she also develops a typology of Lebanese elites.”—Middle East Journal

Performing Democracy in Iraq and South Africa

Gender, Media, and Resistance

Kimberly Wedeven Segall

“Segall’s book draws our attention to the use of media, art and popular culture by ordinary people living through extraordinary times. She highlights the role of affect and emotion in resisting, negotiating, understanding and coping with dramatic and sometimes violent political change.”

—Nicola Pratt, coauthor of What Kind of Liberation? Women and the Occupation of Iraq

“Segall engages some of the most innovative artists of contemporary South African theatre, including Brett Bailey, Yaël Farber, and Nadia Davids. Performing artists’ meditations on the complexities of post-apartheid democracy illuminate the gulf between South Africa’s constitution and the legacies of an apartheid past evident in persistent violence and socio-economic inequality today.”

—Catherine M. Cole, author of Performing South Africa’s Truth Commission: Stages of Transition

“This is an eloquent and compelling book that writes the forgotten stories of women and artists into the history of violence and consequent change that has become known as the Arab Spring.”

—Deborah Kapchan, author of Gender on the Market

my name on his tongue poems
Laila Halaby

“In her debut poetry collection, best-selling novelist Halaby narrates the need of any Arab American to navigate new realities while giving voice to old ones. . . . She deploys sarcasm and irony to express her bitterness over the trend of cultural demonizing, and her heritage, with its strong narrative of historical grievances, gives the poems a melancholy tone. VERDICT: Halaby transfers her life’s experiences into emotionally touching poems. Recommended for all readers, especially those interested in Arab American literature.”—Library Journal

Reading Arabia

British Orientalism in the Age of Mass Publication, 1880-1930

Andrew C. Long

“Selectively employing the methods of psychoanalytic criticism and cultural studies, Long’s book provides a vivid picture of the social and intellectual atmospheres within which British travelers swanned, splashed and stumbled through history.”

—Ken Seigneurie, author of Standing by the Ruins

“Reading the works of such prominent figures as Burton, Doughty, and Lawrence, Long makes a compelling argument about the productive function of the Oriental fantasy in mass culture and consumer economy of the late Empire.”

—Ali Behdad, the author of Belated Travelers: Orientalism in the Age of Colonial Dissolution

“The typical reader is likely to gain a deeper understanding about the ways Orientalist ideas have penetrated popular culture right up to the present. . . . A very important book.”

Jamaat-e-Islami Women in Pakistan
Vanguard of a New Modernity?
Amina Jamal

“Amina Jamal’s learned and masterly study of Jamaat-e-Islami women in Pakistan is a brilliant intervention into a specifically South Asian gendered modernity. This is required reading for all those interested in the heterogeneity of Muslim women and in the emergence of a female vanguard that cannot be understood through a dichotomy between secular and religious.”

—Inderpal Grewal, author of Home and Harem

“Jamal’s biggest contribution lies in her ability to challenge the popular constructions of women who occupy leadership positions in the Jamaat....Rather than being rooted in the past, as is so often believed, these women . . . play a very active role in using modernity to meet their ends.”

—Sadaf Ahmad, author of Transforming Faith

“By nature of its innovative and original analysis of women members of the Jamaat-e-Islami in Pakistan, the book represents a crucial contribution to the field of Pakistan, Islam, and women’s studies.”

Becoming Turkish

Nationalist Reforms and Cultural Negotiations in Early Republican Turkey (1923–1945)

Hale Yılmaz

“Yılmaz has provided an innovative and nuanced reinterpretation of early republican Turkish history through her creative use of oral interviews and previously untapped government sources. This book sets the tone for future studies of Turkish social history.”

—Gavin Brockett, associate professor of history, Wilfrid Laurier University

“In this highly original book, Hale Yılmaz uses hitherto unavailable archival material and oral history accounts to analyze aspects of everyday culture in interwar Turkey that scholars know about but have not looked at closely.”

—Houchang Chehabi, professor of international relations and history, Boston University

“Yılmaz examines how individuals and families responded differently to reforms. In doing so, she successfully demonstrates that a national program was both applied and received variously, not homogeneously, in different regions.”

The Perils of Joy
Contesting Mulid Festivals in Contemporary Egypt
Samuli Schielke

“This well-focused study unfolds along multiple lines of investigation ranging from diverse ways of experiencing the festival itself through variously couched denunciations of mulids, and attempts to reform them.”

—Ann G. Gold, author of A Carnival of Parting

Schielke argues that mulids are characterized by a utopian momentum of the extraordinary that troubles the grand schemes of order and perfection that have become hegemonic in Egypt since the twentieth century. Not an opposition between state and civil society, nor a division between Islamists and secularists, but rather the competition between different perceptions of what makes up a complete life forms the central line of conflict in the contestation of festive culture.
